A Man Who Didn't Succeed in Naming His Own Horse.

The Board of Control held a meeting yesterlay, discussed various subjects and passed upon the applications of several trainers and jockeys for licenses. It was expected that the Board would form and pet tuto practice a rule which would compel bookmakers to sell as one stable, in the betting, two or more horses

Nothing would have pleased racegoers more than the adoption of this rate, and in all fair-ness to better- it should certainly be done. It would do away with such disagreeable occur-rences as the Russell-Terrifer incident in the early part of the present meeting, and be of benefit in many other ways. So far an can be learned, the matter was not touched upon. Apparently the Board of Control was constructed only with a view to licensin and trainers. The racing public have not as
